Reds Hurl Back All Nazi Drives Near Stalingrad

Russians Also Counter-Attack and Register Small Gains

Germans Driven Out of Two Approaches to the City

By EDDY GILMORE

MOSCOW, Monday, Aug. 31 (AP)—The Russian defenders of Stalingrad have hurled back all German attacks and struck counter-blows in some sectors, a communique said today, while the Red army made new gains on the Moscow front and in a new offensive pushed back the German spearhead aimed at the Grozny oil field in the Caucasus.

Soviet troops supported by Volga marines and armed peasants launched counterattacks both northwest and southwest of Stalingrad, inflicting heavy losses on the enemy, particularly on an Italian battalion which was said to have lost seventy per cent of its men.

No Gains Claimed
The communique did not claim any gains in these attacks, but earlier reports said the Russians had driven the Germans from two settlements on the distant approaches to the city.

On the Moscow front, which extends about seventy miles from Rely to the north, the Russians said their forces had made a new crossing of a river (presumably the Volga) and were now fighting on the west bank. Another crossing was announced yesterday.

In the Caucasus, where the Germans had pushed a slender wedge along the railway to the area of Prokhladnenski, about fifty miles from the oil fields, the Russians also counter-attacked and recaptured an unidentified village.

Whether this was a general offensive or a local attack was not indicated. The communique merely said that "as a result of stubborn fighting our troops broke the resistance of the enemy and occupied an inhabited locality." It added that nine German tanks were destroyed and about a battalion of German infantry killed.

Announcing the new gains north of Moscow, the high command said:

Announce New Gains
"On the Western front Soviet troops fought for river crossings. At the end of the day our troops crossed the river and continued fighting on its western bank."

Soviet Aviators Bombard Germany

LONDON, Aug. 30 (AP)—Soviet aircraft, pinch-hitting for the weather-bombard RAF, left a trail of bombs through Eastern Germany last night, raiding Berlin, Koenigsberg and Danzig, it was stated by dispatches from Moscow.

The RAF, held to its bases by unfavorable flying weather, took a night raid. But daylight hours brought a re-annihilation of what is virtually a non-stop air attack on Germany and occupied territories in the west. The day's operations appeared to be limited to scattered intruder attacks on such cross-channel targets as locks, airfields, repair depots and motor caravans.

A DNB report broadcast from Berlin said the German air force bombed Brighton and Swindon in Southern England last night.

Larry Allen Describes Terrific Attack on British Destroyer

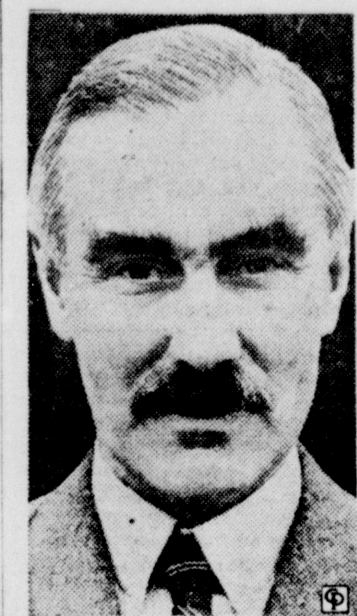

By LARRY ALLEN

ABOARD A BRITISH DESTROYER OFF THE EGYPTIAN COAST, Aug. 30 (AP)—Attacked by more than thirty Stukas, this British destroyer fought her way back to port today under one of the fiercest, most intensive dive-bombing attacks made on any warship in this war. Hundreds of bombs fell about her. Nazi and Italian planes, operating from bases near El Alamein, bombed out of the blinding sun, dropping stick after stick of high explosives and machine-gunning her decks.

Even the Nazi shore batteries joined in the fight in an assault paralleled in my experience since the bombing of the aircraft carrier

Petain Assails Enemies of His Pro-Nazi Plans

Scores "Backward Looking Frenchmen"; Silent about Dakar

CLERMONT FERRAND, UNOCCUPIED FRANCE, Aug. 30 (AP)—Marshal Petain, speaking at a picturesque ceremony on ground where Gallic chiefs assailed Caesar in their first success against an organized invader, today assailed "backward looking Frenchmen" who labor at "treason" against his regime.

The marshal's first political speech since he explained the circumstances of the appointment of Pierre Laval as head of the French government last April was made at an Imperial soil-mixing service on the second anniversary of the founding of the French Legion, the only officially sanctioned political movement in unoccupied France.

He told the Legionnaires that a "sect mocking the noblest sentiments pursues its labor of treason under cover of patriotism."

Keeps Details Secret

While the marshal insisted the Vichy government will carry out its program of "revolution" despite all obstacles, he failed to elaborate on details of French domestic politics, his international policy, or the government's present drive to send workmen to Germany.

He also passed over a subject on which the French press was expressing concern—the status of Dakar. The papers published dispatches from Berlin charging that the United States fleet is preparing to take possession of Dakar, the Azores, the Canary and Cape Verde islands (Continued on Page 2, Col. 5)

Duchess of Kent Attends Service

LONDON, Aug. 30 (AP)—The Duchess of Kent, heavily veiled, attended a memorial service today for her husband at the little parish church of Iwer near which the Kents lived. The duke was killed last week in a plane crash in North Scotland while bound for Iceland on a military mission.

The church was crowded by villagers. The service originally was planned for yesterday when the funeral of the duke was held. It was postponed at the request of the duchess so that she could attend.

Tremendous Barrage

I and the officers and crew of the destroyer went through one of the longest days of our lives, firing thousands of shells in a tremendous concentrated barrage trying to keep off the planes which zoomed down in spine-chilling roars, peeling off in seemingly never-ending formations. Empty shell-casings by the hundreds littered the decks. Heavy-lidded gunners, literally dead on their feet, kept up a constant stream of fire. These were hours of hell but the destroyer steamed on, her white ensign flying proud and high. For myself, sometimes glancing skyward from the bridge to watch

Great Sacrifices Necessary, Returning American Asserts

WASHINGTON, Aug. 30 (AP)—A solemn warning that the Japanese will fight "with all the force and power at their command" until they are utterly crushed, and that great sacrifices are necessary by Americans to avoid a stalemate was delivered tonight by white-haired Joseph C. Grew, the former ambassador newly returned from Tokyo.

From the background of his ten years' service in Japan, Grew declared that "we are up against a powerful fighting machine, a people whose morale cannot and will not be broken even by successive defeats, who will certainly not be broken by economic hardships, a people who individually and collectively will gladly sacrifice their lives for their emperor and their nation, and who can be brought to earth only by xxx complete defeat in battle."

Maximum Effort Needed

This ominous report, delivered in an address prepared for the Columbia Broadcasting System and constituting Grew's first public utterance since his return on the Gripsholm last week, was lightened only by a declaration that "we could win the conflict through 'the exertion of our maximum capacities, individually and collectively, in a war of offense.'"

At the same time Grew gave his official confirmation to the accounts of atrocities reported by returning newspapermen and others, including a detailed account of the "water cure" administered to three elderly (Continued on Page 2, Col. 2)

Police Probing Death of Girl; Hold Young Man

Miss Maud Ward Found Fatally Injured Near Pocomoke City

POCOMOKE CITY, Md., Aug. 30 (AP)—Worcester county authorities and state police investigated today the death of Miss Maud Ward, 20, of near Pocomoke City, who was found lying unconscious near her automobile on the Snow Hill highway.

State's Attorney William G. Kerbin, who said he suspected "foul play" and that he "expected a break in the case" soon, declared a 28-year-old Pocomoke City cannery worker was being questioned.

Last Seen with Sister

The girl left the home of her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Archie Ward, a mile and a half from here Saturday at 6 a. m. to take her younger sister to work in Pocomoke City.

About 9 a. m. Kerbin said, a negro saw the young woman lying on the roadside apparently unconscious. Her car was parked about 100 yards away. The man said he did not stop, but went to Pocomoke City and notified Police Chief Arthur W. Brittingham.

Found Unconscious

Brittingham said the woman was moaning, and unconscious, apparently from a head wound. He took her to a Pocomoke City physician, who sent her to Peninsula General Hospital, Salisbury, where Miss Ward died about 2 p. m.

State police, under direction of Sgt. J. R. Buckworth of the Salisbury sub-station, aided Worcester county authorities in the investigation.

Kerbin said that Miss Ward died without gaining consciousness, and thus was unable to give any statement.

Orson Wells Again Creates Excitement

INDIANAPOLIS, Aug. 30 (AP)—Orson Wells, who once excited the nation with a "Men from Mars" broadcast, excited a few folks again last night.

A youngster walked into a gasoline station as Wells shouted, "hand over your money!" amid a crime skit tuned in on the boy's portable radio. Grover Turner, in the rear, thought his partner was being held up and ran for help. Four squad cars and two detectives responded to the alarm relayed via police radio. The "holdup" was one of the quickest "solved" in police history.

Seven Japanese Planes Destroyed In the Solomons

Total of 111 Enemy Aircraft Brought Down during Campaign

Navy Patrol Bombers Attack Four Japanese Destroyers

WASHINGTON, Aug. 30 (AP)—American forces defending their newly-won outpost in the Solomon Islands shot down seven out of twenty-four Japanese planes which came over to attack them in two waves Saturday, the Navy announced today, raising to at least 111 the enemy's plane losses to date in the Solomons campaign.

No American planes were lost, the navy reported, and "damage to our positions was minor." The Japanese planes destroyed included three bombers and four "zero" fighters.

The raids were directed against United States troops and installations on Guadalcanal island, site of a large Japanese-developed airport which invading American marines have converted to their own use. The attacks came about eight hours apart. The first was made by six planes, which the navy did not identify as to type, and the second by eighteen bombers.

Seek To Harass Americans

The purpose of the raids apparently was to harass the Americans and disrupt as much as possible their work of consolidating their positions in preparation for their next move, which may be either a blow at Japanese bases in the northwest Solomons or, if the enemy renews land and sea attacks, defensive action.

The Japanese have offered no serious threat in the Solomons for four days now and the Navy announced last night that the marines had their positions well established. It thus appeared that any fresh attempt at dislodgement would have to be made in force to give the enemy any hope of success.

The last report of any general sea and air action came from the navy on Wednesday and said that the marines were holding firm in the face of strong enemy thrusts. The Japanese relaxed their pressure and withdrew their sea forces, which had included aircraft carriers and at least one battleship, and since then the situation has steadily improved.

Attack Four Destroyers

It was announced yesterday that Navy patrol bombers and dive bombers had intercepted a squadron of four destroyers enroute to supply Japanese patrols in nearby Santa Isabel island and had scored hits on three of the ships, sinking one, probably sinking another and damaging a third. This raid on the part of the naval air forces followed several defensive air actions in which attacking Jap planes suffered heavy losses without causing any serious damage.

By last night the position of the marines had grown so strong that the navy could announce that only "mopping up" operations were in progress along with further strengthening of vantage points on six Solomon islands now in American hands — Guadalcanal, Tulagi, Florida, Tananabogo, Makambo and Gavutu.

Two More Merchantmen Attacked By Submarines; One Reaches Port

(By The Associated Press)

Two more merchantmen—an American vessel and a British cargo ship—were torpedoed by Axis submarines in the Caribbean, the Navy disclosed yesterday (Sun), but the American craft was towed safely to port and the British ship, her back broken, was finished off by a friendly naval vessel.

Alert and sharp-shooting Navy gunners aboard the American merchantman drove off the raider and saved the ship with a shot that narrowly missed the U-boat's conning tower. The submarine had surfaced after firing a torpedo into the vessel which nearly wrecked the engine room, killed two seamen but failed to sink the ship. The near miss forced the undersea craft to crash-dive.

British Attack Tiny Island in Mediterranean

Launch Commando-Style Raid on Antikythera between Greece and Crete

LONDON, Aug. 30 (AP)—A mysterious commando-style raid on the tiny island of Antikythera, between Greece and Crete, and a hot twenty-four hours of air action directed against Sicily from reinforced Malta, indicated today that the British once more were striking strongly for the initiative in the Mediterranean.

At the same time British submarines were reported to be taking a heavy toll in attacks on convoys trying to get reinforcements, oil and ammunition through to Field Marshal Erwin Rommel whose expected offensive in the direction of Alexandria and the Nile Delta appeared to be fading with the waning of the desert moon.

At the same time a Reuters, British news agency, dispatch from "aboard a British destroyer in the Eastern Mediterranean," reported that a British force of destroyers rained shells on Rommel's tank repair shops and stores at El Daba on the Egyptian coast early Saturday morning.

Transocean said that Russia, previously opposed to having foreign Allied troops on Russian territory, had been induced to change its attitude in view of the German thrust into the Caucasus, and that an Anglo-American military mission has established itself at Tiflis.

Transocean also said an American mission in Teheran is reorganizing special troops of the Iran army.

Treasury Seeks "Spending Tax" On Individuals

Would Yield Upwards of $5,000,000,000 Yearly, Estimate Shows

By JACK BELL

WASHINGTON, Aug. 30 (AP)—Treasury proposals for a new wartime tax on individuals—a "spending tax" calculated to yield upwards of $5,000,000,000 annually—will be laid before the Senate Finance committee Tuesday, chairman George (D-Ga.) said today.

Designed to tighten the brakes on inflation and to boost revenues substantially beyond the $24,000,000,000 yearly estimated yield under rates voted by the House, the new levy would impose additional taxes on practically all persons with more than $1,000 annual income.

As outlined by George to reporters, the proposed spending tax would be levied on the total of all money paid out by an individual during the course of the year in excess of certain specified exemptions.

10 Per Cent Considered

Although George said he was not conversant with all the details, there were indications that the rate might be as high as ten per cent, possibly with graduated increases in the higher brackets of expenditures. It would be imposed over and above all other levies now in effect and proposed in the new bill, he said.

To compute his spending liability, a taxpayer would figure his net income for the year, taking into account all the deductions and exemptions he customarily is allowed in determining his income tax.

When this amount had been arrived at, he then could make additional deductions for payments on debts (including insurance premiums and taxes), purchases of government bonds, investments in capital assets (such as a house, but not a fur coat) and other expenditures the treasury may specify later.

Australian and American Forces Score Impressive Victory

Port Moresby Saved for Fourth Time, MacArthur Reports

GENERAL MACARTHUR'S HEADQUARTERS, AUSTRALIA, Monday, Aug. 31 (AP)—Outguessing the Japanese and smashing them in a carefully prepared ambush, Australian and American forces have hurled back the Japanese spearhead thrust into Milne Bay and thereby have saved Port Moresby for the fourth time, General Douglas MacArthur announced today.

A special communique, handed out at MacArthur's headquarters with smiles all around, announced that the "Milne Bay area is rapidly being cleared of the enemy... his losses have been heavy... all his heavy supplies and equipment including tanks were lost."

The first word of victory said the Japanese still left in the Milne Bay area, on New Guinea's southeastern tip, were being rapidly reduced in the narrow confines of the peninsula north of the bay.

Ground Troops Repulsed

Then shortly afterward in its regular daily communique the Allied command announced that Japanese ground troops had been repulsed with heavy casualties in the Kokoda area, just sixty miles east of Port Moresby, inland from the Gona-Buna area.

At the same time it was disclosed that Japanese ground activity had increased at Salamaua, 180 miles due north of Port Moresby, in another phase of the resurgence of fighting over a wide area of New Guinea.

The Allies attacked a Japanese cruiser and transport at Rabaul, big enemy base on New Britain, with results unobserved.

Some Japanese Escape

General MacArthur said some remnants of the Japanese "were probably saved from destruction by evacuation by naval warcraft under cover of darkness." (Presumably they left on the Japanese cruiser and other destroyers reported to have entered the bay Saturday.)

The communique disclosed that the Allies were fully prepared for the landing in the jungle mud of the point of land some 225 miles southeast of Port Moresby and 420 miles from the nearest point on the Australian mainland.

Germany Reports Gains in Russia

BERLIN (From German Broadcasts) Aug. 30 (AP)—DNB, German official news agency, and the high command said today that the powerful Russian smashes west of Moscow have gained some ground, but declared the strongly fortified defense system of Stalingrad on the Volga had been deeply pierced.

German forces continued to gain on the lower Kuban of the western Caucasus despite "difficult terrain," the high command said.

It was insisted in official quarters that German defensive tactics and counter-attacks have stopped the Russians in their offensive west of Moscow for the past month and have inflicted on them losses "out of all proportions to tactical considerations." The German positions, in the main, are intact, the high command declared.

Absentee Voting Bill Ready for Conference Vote

Anti-Poll Tax Feature May Cause Defeat of Measure

WASHINGTON, Aug. 30 (AP)—Congressional leaders laid plans today to send the service men's absentee voting bill to a Senate-House conference committee for disposition of its anti-poll tax feature but the controversy caused by this provision made the fate of the measure uncertain.

Sponsors of the bill proposed to move tomorrow to send it immediately to conference without further debate in the House but this action might be blocked by a single member, delaying consideration until a quorum of the House could be assembled. Many members have left the capital during the current informal recess.

Lack Only a Quorum

"There is no doubt we can pass the bill with the poll tax amendment if we had a quorum in town," said Rep. Ramsay (D-W.Va.), its sponsor. "We can't pass it without a quorum because opponents can block that move by demanding the attendance of a majority of the members."

The poll tax amendment, adopted by the Senate thirty-three to twenty after spirited debate, provides that soldiers and sailors may vote without paying poll taxes even though their home states require them as a qualification of voting. Poll taxes are levied in Tennessee, Arkansas, Mississippi, South Carolina, Georgia, Alabama, Texas and Virginia.

Aids Southern Negroes

Edgar G. Brown, director of the National Negro Council, said the provision would affect 400,000 negro servicemen and hailed it as the first concrete step taken in Congress to enfranchise thousands of Southern negroes. His organization launched a campaign to bring absent representatives back to the capital to vote on it.

Some proponents of the poll tax waiver oppose sending the bill to conference immediately lest the conferees eliminate the provision or bottle up the measure indefinitely.

off in all directions. Every time I walked on deck the sun was shining from a different quarter. It must have all been very confusing to any Japanese spy who may have been lurking in the offing.

We moved without incident for several days, until one morning the loudspeakers broke into the crisp "ack-ack-ack" signal of general quarters — warning that danger, real or potential, was imminent.

There was no particular excitement on my ship. The crew moved to their battle stations with incredible speed and the marines retired in orderly fashion to the troop compartments. A few minutes later the "all clear" sounded. The three planes which had swooped over the horizon to the port side had been identified as friendly.

Later in the day, marines sunning themselves on deck saw two tiny specks on the horizon to starboard. Soon they could be recognized as ships. In five minutes, every off-duty man on board was crowding the rail. The same thing was happening on every other transport I could see.

The two specks became three, then five, then more. Men with binoculars spotted aircraft carriers, heavy cruisers and giant transports. It was the best morale-booster I've ever seen.

There was a terrific let-down for a few minutes when it appeared that the powerful convoy was going to steam right by, but it finally swung ponderously around and fell into line behind us.

Still Another Convoy

Less than an hour after the first two specks had appeared to starboard, the ship's grapevine went into action with reports of another convoy rising from the sea to port. Sure enough, when I walked over to the rail I saw what appeared to be a mirrored duplicate of the earlier scene. I felt better — in fact I felt very good.

For a couple of days we moved along together. Occasionally a ship or group of ships slipped over the horizon, only to reappear later on. During all this time the only dry land sighted was in the sand looker.

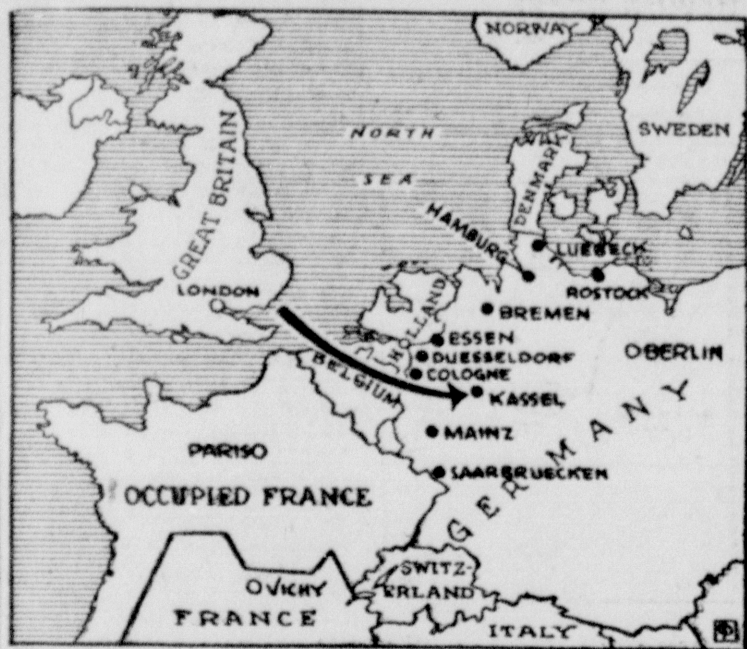

Finally, however, we began to move through a group of blue ghost islands that seemed scarcely different from the cloudbanks the marines had been so positively identifying as terra firma. By that time I was generally conceded that a very tangible objective lay ahead of us.

Unit commanders gathered their men together and told them the details of the plan of attack. The objectives of our force were Guadalcanal and the neighboring Florida Island in the Solomons group.

The date, August seventh, was well chosen. Eight months after the treacherous assault on Pearl Harbor the Allies struck a powerful retaliatory blow in an action that is a rerun of someday clearing up the Pacific. It was the kick-off of the best-trained, best coached military team in the world. The goal line is many thousands miles away, but many marines who saw action at Guadalcanal will live to march victoriously through the streets of Japan's capital.

"See you in Tokyo" is the watchword of the marines.

INTERPRETING THE WAR NEWS

By KIRKE L. SIMPSON
Associated Press Staff Writer

You can take it from the record now that the American fighting man is a better fighter than his Japanese enemy, that his leaders are smarter than their Japanese opposites and that American arms are a match for anything produced in the arsenals of the Rising Sun.

American military and naval men have been saying those things all along but sometimes when the war in the Pacific was going badly they had a flat flavor. And the impression got around that the Jap was an inhumanly tough and wily warrior — and how in all reason could he be liked?

This impression resulted from his successes in the Philippines, Malaya and the Dutch East Indies, although it should have been apparent that the Jap was fighting a campaign he had been planning many years while his opponents were ill-armed, little trained and flabby.

Japs Not Super Men

People who had scoffed at the Japanese before Pearl Harbor began talking, in the months of defeat, about what an amazingly different sort of fellow the enemy had turned out to be. They swung from one extreme conception to the other: the obese little man with a buck-tooth grin became a fanged demon on whom nobody in East Asia or the Western Pacific could lay a restraining hand.

If the American marines' successful conquest of the southeastern Solomon Islands had done nothing but destroy that illusion about the Jap's fighting prowess it probably would have been well worth while. For the record of the Solomon's action shows that while the Jap is a desperate warrior, he can be killed or captured by a braver, smarter man determined to fight through to victory.

The diplomat also recounted the deceitful manner in which Foreign Minister Togo treated his presentation of President Roosevelt's eleventh hour message to Emperor Hirohito, keeping Grew in "entire ignorance" of the attack on Pearl Harbor even as conversations took place.

The atrocities, Grew said, represented "the ugly side" of the Japanese people — "the cruelty, brutality and utter bestiality, the ruthlessness and rapaciousness of the Japanese military machine which brought on this war."

His Friends Loyal

Personal friends of long standing, he related, tried to ease his days of imprisonment after Dec. 7 with gifts of food, "sometimes a piece of meat, which was the most precious gift they could confer because they themselves could seldom get meat. They were personally loyal to me to the end."

But as patriots, he continued, even these Japanese "will fight for their emperor and country, to the last ditch if necessary."

"The idea should not for a moment be entertained that the failure of the Japanese forces in China has discouraged the Japanese people," Grew said. "It has instead served to steel them for still greater sacrifices and to prepare them better for the war of deadly purpose to conquer upon which they have finally embarked."

Japs Strong Aggressors

Speaking of an offensive spirit which permeates all classes of Japanese people, the envoy reported that the Nipponese high command has counted heavily upon the advantage this would give them over less aggressive enemies.

"They have put great store in what they consider to be the white man's flabbiness," he declared. "They look upon us Americans as constitutional weaklings, demanding our daily comforts and unwilling to make the sacrifices demanded for victory in a war against a military machine which has prepared and trained itself in Spartan simplicity and the hardness and toughness demanded by war."

"When they struck, they made no provision for failure, they left no road open for retreat. They struck with all the force and power at their command. And they will continue to fight in the same manner until they are utterly crushed."

Magazine Covers Of Risque Type Lose Mail Rights

Post Office Officials Clamp Down on Many Publications

By JAMES J. STREIBIG

WASHINGTON, Aug. 30 (AP)—A picture of a girl with pretty legs, and pretty much of them showing, may brighten a magazine occasionally but as a standard decoration it isn't what the Post Office department wants to carry at an eighty per cent loss.

And that, officials said today, is why you may see on the news stands fewer and fewer magazines fronted with risque pictures and filled with more of the same.

In the past two months, the department has barred the second class mails with their low rates to more than twenty periodicals, some of them widely known. In some cases the second class privilege has been revoked, in others current issues have been barred and the publishers have been ordered to show why they should not lose the privilege, and in a few the department has refused admission to the mails.

Right Out in the Open

Fred A. Ironside, Jr., right hand man to Postmaster General Walker, explained that what appears to be a campaign against obscenity in the mails is nothing more than bringing into the open a type of action which heretofore had proceeded in private.

Orders involving the second class mail privilege had been entirely secret, with no official record of the testimony and arguments. Now the entire proceeding has been formalized. The complaints are published, hearings are open, and testimony is officially recorded.

This reflects the importance the postmaster general attaches to the second class privilege, Ironside said in an interview. It cost the department $108,144,994 to handle second class mail in the 1941 fiscal year, while revenue was only $24,309,630, a deficit of $83,835,364.

Obscenity Involved

The bulk of actions recently have involved charges of obscenity. A few have been based on allegations of seditious matter, the most prominent case being that against Social Justice, the weekly magazine founded by the Rev. Charles E. Coughlin at Royal Oak, Mich. The paper suspended publication without contesting the charge.

The National Police Gazette, 97-year-old sports magazine which once was a barbershop fixture, is one of the best known magazines called upon to defend its mailing rights. The hearing has been scheduled for Tuesday. Other widely known periodicals called to account include Argosy, True Confessions, Film Fun and College Humor.

From the bridge of the destroyer just before dawn Aug. 29 I watched her and other warships fling tounded shells into Field Marshal Erwin Rommel's tank base, repair shops and supply depots hidden in the desert two miles from the coast at El Daba.

Roosevelt's Desk Being Cleared Of Petty Tasks

Way Paved for President To Concentrate on Winning the War

By IRVING PERLMETER

WASHINGTON, Aug. 30 (AP)—Many steps are being taken, official sources related today, to clear President Roosevelt's desk of petty routine so he can concentrate on the war.

Until recently, for instance, he had to examine hundreds of orders putting a few acres of land in the public domain or taking it off. The budget bureau, Justice and Interior departments worked out a procedure by which, for the first time in history, the president was relieved of bothering with them.

More hundreds of orders were being signed by Mr. Roosevelt authorizing experienced government workers to stay in service after reaching the retirement age of 70. A study of civil service laws showed that the same goal could be gained, without bothering the president, by technically retiring the employees and rehiring them instantaneously.

In the same field, the president's "O. K." on certain types of salary increases was made unnecessary by a transfer of authority to the Civil Service Commission.

Officials are sponsoring legislation to permit department heads to settle the hundreds of "personal injury" claims — up to $1,000 — of citizens against the government. These usually result from somebody's being hit by a government truck or stumbling on postoffice steps. At present, special acts of Congress to pay the claims must be signed by the president.

No one but the president can sign an act of Congress but this situation has been improved, too. The president usually asks his various departments to study these new acts before he signs or vetoes them. Formerly, the one official copy of the act was passed around for this purpose until, in some cases, the copy was lost or so soiled and dog-eared it was illegible. Use of copies was not deemed feasible because the significance of an act might depend on as little as a comma in its text.

Now, however, the same printing type from which the official copy is made is used to make duplicates which subordinates can handle safely, while the president has the clean, official copy before him during the full ten days within which he must act. Under the old system, sometimes he had no chance to read the official act nearly until his ten days were nearly up.

Petain Assails

as soon as the rainy season is past. The impression prevailed that Dakar and other French territories in Africa have assumed tactical importance because of Brazil's entry into the war.

(The comparatively short distance between Natal, port on the "eastward bulge of Brazil," and Dakar last week prompted Col. Lysias A. Rodrigues of the Brazilian air force general staff to call it the "Straits of Dakar" and to call Brazil a great promontory favorable for offensive action.)

May Bow to Germans

(Rumors reported in Stockholm dispatches that Laval was about to agree to demands from Berlin to permit the stationing of a German division at Dakar to protect French territory from the Americans.)

"Too many Frenchmen look back and think it is still possible to return to the ease of former days, the old regime," Petain said. "They include capitalists blinded by their selfishness, trusts greedy to get back their old privileges, elements passive if not openly hostile."

"I declare to you, a page in our history has been turned. The past is dead and buried. That is why my government and its chief Monsieur Pierre Laval, continue the national revolution, and will carry it on to completion despite obstacles."

launched his "disastrous" campaign last May to take Eastern China airfields and seize a railway route to Singapore.

Lungyu Reported Taken

The high command has not announced the capture of Lungyu but a Central news agency dispatch said the city was occupied by the Chinese this morning after spirited fighting during the night.

Lungyu is twenty miles east of Chushien, site of the biggest air base in China, and twenty-five miles northwest of Kihwa, former capital of the province.

It was also reported unofficially that the Chinese had occupied Lanchi, twenty miles northwest of Lungyu and terminus of a branch rail line from Kihwa.

The Japanese captured Lanchi May 30 fifteen days after launching the drive which resulted in occupation of wide areas of Chekiang and Kiangsi provinces and the capture of the 350-mile Chekiang-Kiangsi railroad.

The recapture of Lanchi thus would endanger Kihwa and possibly expedite the withdrawal of Japanese troops from the railway between Lungyu and Kihwa.

United States Proposes Relaying Supplies to Prisoners in Japan

Supplies to Prisoners in Japan In United States

WASHINGTON, Aug. 30 (AP)—In the face of Japan's refusal to allow a neutral ship to carry food and clothing direct to imprisoned Americans under International Red Cross supervision, the United States has proposed that these supplies be relayed in American and Japanese Red Cross ships meeting at Portuguese East Africa, the State department announced tonight.

The proposal was made in a note dispatched by Acting Secretary of State Sumner Welles to the Tokyo government through Swiss authorities.

At the same time Welles reminded the Japanese of their obligation under the Geneva convention to facilitate delivery of supplies to prisoners and internees and declared that the United States, "while looking to the Japanese government to fulfill its obligations under the convention, is fully conscious of its own obligations."

Break Geneva Pledge

The note, in five parts, recalled that the Tokyo government in February had agreed to abide by the Geneva convention. As a result, Welles stated, the American Red Cross assumed that the Japanese would allow safe conduct for a neutral ship to carry supplies to American prisoners of war and civilian internees in Japanese custody "as German and Italian governments have done and are continuing to do for supplies being sent for prisoners and internees in their custody."

Invaders Lose

had failed in three previous attempts to move on the major Allied base in New Guinea, the communiqué said:

"His latest effort was to turn the right flank by a surprise attack at Milne Bay."

"The move was anticipated, however, and prepared for with great care. With complete secrecy the position was occupied by our forces and concerted into a strong point. The enemy fell into the trap with disastrous results to him."

The General's spokesman, who handed out the communiqué smilingly, said "that's all for now. There is no amplification of this communiqué." But it told plenty.

Australians in Action

The soldiers who fought the Japanese to a standstill and then threw them back in Milne Bay's treacherous ground and mud were Australian veterans and militia, commanded by Major General Cyril Albert Dwyer, an artillery officer, wearer of the distinguished service order, and a veteran of the Middle East campaign with the Australian Imperial force.

They were, the communiqué said, "brilliantly supported by American and Australian air units . . . The Japanese landed last Wednesday and the battle was joined immediately by the Allied forces in their ambush."

Each communiqué indicated that the trend was inconclusive as the bitter struggle raged in the jungle and on the shore but suddenly today there came the special announcement of victory.

For the first time, General MacArthur gave a report on the enemy's efforts to capture Port Moresby, which would be a prime invasion base for moves against Australia.

This operation presents another phase in the pattern of the enemy's plans to capture Port Moresby, the communiqué said. "This citadel is guarded by the natural defense line of the Owen Stanley range."

Jap Attack Fails

"The first effort was to turn its left flank from Lae and Salamaua (where the Japanese landed last March 8), which proved impracticable. He then launched an attack in large convoy force against its rear."

"This was repulsed and dissipated by air and sea action in the Coral Sea. He then tried to pierce the center in a weak attempt by way of Buna-Gona-Kokoda, subjecting himself to extraordinary air losses because of the extreme vulnerability of his exposed position."

Then came the thrust against Milne Bay.

The communiqué's mention that tanks and other heavy supplies were abandoned on the jungle beaches was the first word that such supplies and tanks had been landed.

Malta Gets into Action

Malta, which recently received important reinforcements from a convoy which cost the British a cruiser and a small aircraft carrier and other losses, got into action at once.

British night fighters swarmed over to Sicily, attacked a seaplane base, brought down one German seaplane and shot up a motor vessel from a low level.

On Thursday morning the Axis attempted a high flying fighter sweep near Malta, but Spitfires engaged the enemy planes at sea and damaged two of the fighters, the air ministry said.

Later in the day Spitfires strafed the Sicilian airfields, shooting up groups of soldiers, hangars, barracks, storehouses and railroad properties. Enemy planes were attacked in the air and on the ground.

Destroy Ten Axis Planes

This was the first time Spitfires had been used for ground strafing in Sicily. The air ministry said dense smoke rose all about the airfields when the RAF, having destroyed ten planes, headed back for their bases in Malta. The raiders shot up three schooners off the coast on the way back.

At twilight an Axis convoy was attacked with torpedoes and bombs and a medium-sized merchant ship, escorted by a destroyer, was sunk by a torpedo. Both the ship and the destroyer were attacked from different levels and the destroyer was seen to be smoking.

British fighters also destroyed an Italian bomber and damaged a Junkers eighty-eight which tried to intercept the RAF planes as they hammered again at the Sicilian airfields at night.

high command which said a "small enemy unit" made a landing attempt on the night of Aug. 28 but "fled on the quick intervention of our defenses."

The island is about five miles long, and from one to three miles wide, has a population of only a few hundred and lies just south of Kythera, southernmost of the Ionian Islands. Rocky and barren, it is almost midway of the sixty mile distance between Greece and Crete.

An authoritative source here said "it is not unlikely that some sort of landing was made" but added he would not be surprised "if we never heard of it officially."

The raid on Sicily started last Wednesday night, the air ministry announced today, when a small number of Axis planes tried to pierce the defenses of the world's most bombed place. Two of the bombers were shot down and another was believed to have been destroyed.

Singapore Called Vital To United Nations

WASHINGTON, Aug. 30 (AP)—"Desperate and probably costly efforts to regain Singapore" eventually must be made by the United Nations as a "prerequisite of victory," said a study released today by the American Council on Public Affairs, a private research organization.

Declaring that the fall of Singapore cannot be considered "exclusively a British responsibility," Prof. Eugene H. Miller of Ursinus college, author of the study, said that the huge naval base "remains the most vital key to the control of the Pacific and Indian oceans and domination of those seas constitutes an indispensable prerequisite of Allied victory."

Akron Is Called Worst Labor Spot In United States

O'Neil Charges CIO Is Cutting Rate of Tire Production

AKRON, O., Aug. 30 (AP)—Akron is the "worst labor spot in the country," William O'Neil, president of the General Tire and Rubber Company, charged today.

O'Neil blamed labor with cutting the rate of tire production "to less than was before Pearl Harbor."

"And don't kid yourself," he said, "until this situation is licked, we won't be able to produce the tires the army needs."

Chief Sources of Labor Friction

Quick denials and counter charges from a spokesman for the CIO, United Rubber Workers of America, bargaining agent in Akron's major tire companies.

"We don't deny that labor is discontented," said the spokesman, "we don't deny there have been a good many wildcat strikes, but management would co-operate, we could solve the situation. They're taking advantage of our no-strike pledge. As for production, being less than before Pearl Harbor, that's nonsense."

Chief sources of labor friction in Akron are the piece-work system, looked upon by union labor as an attempt at speed-up; and the six-hour day, heartily disliked by management.

25 Per Cent Production

O'Neil, elaborating on management's grievances, said, "production now is geared to eighty-five per cent of the capacity of the slowest man in the plant."

"The union leaders smack down any worker who turns out more than his minimum quota. They actually broke the nose of a fellow who earned just five cents more than the regular hourly rate."

"Now they're trying to cut the six-hour day down to four and a half hours. We're paying them $7.93 and $8.80 for six hours, and they want the same pay for four and a half."

continued" northwest of the city, where "all German attacks were repulsed. It added:

"In some sectors our units delivered counterblows, handing the enemy heavy losses."

Southwest of Stalingrad in the Kotelnikovsk area, the communiqué said, one Soviet unit repulsed two German attacks, destroying three enemy tanks and wiping out a company of infantry.

The intensity of air activity over the various fronts was indicated by an increase in airplane losses listed in the weekly summary of the Soviet high command. During the week ending Aug. 29, the communiqué said, the Germans lost 498 planes and the Russians 206.

These figures are the highest in many weeks. Losses as listed by the Russians recently have been: week ending Aug. 8, "about 400" German planes, 205 Russian; week ending Aug. 15, 369 German planes, 241 Russian; week ending Aug. 22, 347 German planes, 194 Russian.

Berlin radio said Sunday night that the Russians had lost 2,688 planes between Aug. 1 and Aug. 28.

The terrific pressure on Stalingrad beat for the sixth day against unyielding Russian defenses.

Hard Blow to Germans

Yet despite the momentary Russian successes, dispatches make clear that the Germans were regrouping depleted forces and shutting new troops to the Stalingrad and Caucasus fronts. This indicated violent new enemy thrusts might begin any hour. The Germans were sorely disappointed.

They had expected to be in Stalingrad by now, and instead the severity of eleventh-hour Russian attacks on the plans between the muddy Volga and Don was forcing them back toward the lesser stream. Already some of the invading spearheads had been wiped out.

Children Should Not Question Parent's Orders

Throttle the "Why?" of Defiant Child, Dr. Myers Advises

By GARRY C. MYERS, Ph. D.
Many a child over six, when commanded by his parents, acts as if he were a prosecuting attorney. He questions and cross-questions his parents before he chooses whether to obey or not.

This practice is absurd. It humiliates the parents and does grave moral harm to the child, cultivating disobedience in him and disregard for constituted authority in any situation. It is no way to build a good foundation for citizenship in democracy.

From time to time, I have, in this column, tried to show practical ways of cultivating easy co-operation and obedience in the growing child. To this end, I have pointed out repeatedly the importance of limiting commands to the very few things the child should not do and of making requests instead.

Reasonable Requests
Commanding a child over five or six to do something other than a routine matter may occasionally be desirable and his age and experience should render him able to profit from a penalty to compel him to do this; yet such occasions should be very seldom.

Being a good parent, you aim to make your requests and commands always so reasonable that your child will discover that you always try to be just and sensible. When you are not sure the reason for your decision against the child or command of him is apparent to him, make clear the reason before you state your decision or command. For your child to develop the habit of always asking why is very bad practice. It usually leads to argument and quarrels.

In case this has become habitual, make up your mind to stop it. At a time when you and the child are calm, announce to him your resolve. Tell him you expect him to obey promptly hereafter without ado, that if, after he has obeyed, he still feels your decision was not just, he may feel free to come and tell you so.

Then you must prove you have been reasonable or apologize. Be sure to make your word good. Then if he proceeds, as formerly, to question you before obeying keep your lips sealed. Should he fail to obey with reasonable promptness, assign an effective punishment. Otherwise avoid any future command unless or until you are sure he will obey or you have the wherewithal to effect obedience in him the next time.

Solving Parent Problems
Q My boy, nine years old, knows he must make a bee-line for the house when the street lights appear and that this rule will continue till its repeal is announced. He says he is the only boy on the street who must follow such a rule and that some of the other boys tease him about it.

A Don't repeat this rule until he is several years older. Refuse to argue with him about it. Years hence he will be grateful to you for your wise guidance. Try to make his evenings indoors interesting and satisfying to him, attracting others there when time permits.

State Street To Become One-Way Thoroughfare
State street in the rear of the Boulevard hotel will become a one-way street, effective Wednesday, September 3, James Orr, police and fire commissioner, announced last evening.

All traffic will travel in a westerly direction when the new ruling becomes effective.

Orr said that the change is necessary because of the increase in vehicular traffic to and from the Kelly-Springfield plant. He added that the change will relieve traffic congestion at that point.

TODAY'S VICTORY GARDEN-GRAPH

By DEAN HALLIDAY

BEWARE OF POISON IVY

This year, due to the fact that many fields and vacant lots were used for victory gardens, poison ivy has caused much misery. Every gardener should be able to distinguish between it and the woodbine.

As illustrated in the Garden-Graph, poison ivy leaves consist of three somewhat oval, pointed leaflets. They are glossy above and hairy beneath. This ivy has small greenish flowers in loose clusters. The fruits, small, round and gray in color, remain on the vine over winter.

The harmless woodbine has leaves which are composed of five leaflets. To eradicate poison ivy follow the given procedure:

With a trowel or sharp weeding tool dig a funnel-shaped hole around the root and pour into it a strong brine solution (three pounds of salt to one gallon of water). After a few days this will kill the vine. It should then be removed by grubbing it out of the ground. Use gloves and avoid touching the plant juices or root sap. Use strong soap or gasoline to wash the hands after handling.

Vincennes, Ind., has lived under three flags, French, British and the Stars and Stripes. Fort Sackville was located there in pioneer days. It is one of the historic cities of the Middle West.

As to Reckless Spendings

CHARGES of wild and reckless squandering on the part of the people by some officials of a government noted for its reckless spending do not appear to be borne out by facts and figures cited by the Magazine of Wall Street. It declares these show no evidence, by and large, that the lucky ones who are "in the money" are inclined to spend it recklessly or go searching around for something to buy just to be buying something.

"The department of Labor," it says, "estimates that the average income of all urban dwellers in the first quarter of this year was seven per cent larger than a year ago, with current consumption expenditures up only two per cent. There was a rise of about seventy per cent in savings put aside. Even families which, on sampling, reported no change in income, reported increase of about fifty per cent in their savings."

"On an average in the first quarter, city families or individual 'consumer units' with incomes of $1,500 to $2,000 saved $5.80 out of every $100 of income, against $1.80 in the first quarter of 1941. For those in the $3,000-$5,000 income group, savings were $12 out of every $100 of income, against $8.70 a year before."

"The department of Commerce will before long publish figures expected to show that in the second quarter the people put aside savings at an annual rate of about $23.5 billions, or an increase of some 115 per cent over the second quarter of last year. The estimate includes allowance for debt reduction, which is going on at a good clip."

"Indeed, the consumers voluntarily are perhaps doing more to hold inflation in check than the government has done to date. They are not only saving more and paring down their debts, they are buying less in physical quantity and dollar value of general merchandise than they were buying a year ago. In ratio to available spendable income, the decline in retail demand is even more striking."

Why, then, it is pertinent to ask, should the people be penalized for this commendable course to such an extent that they will be unable to continue it?

Rail Passenger Business at Peak

PASSENGER TRAVEL on the Baltimore and Ohio railroad is up ninety-nine per cent over a year ago and at an all-time high. Passenger traffic on other railroads is also booming.

The chief reason is that there have been more troop movements in this country during the last five months than during the first fifteen months of the World War. The army's transportation corps is now moving more than a million armed men a month within the United States. The navy is also moving many men.

Soldiers are required to travel more in this war than in the last one. Then the most of them made only two moves by train—from home to training camp and thence to a port of embarkation. Now, however, they make at least six moves. These are from home to an induction station, home again on a brief furlough to adjust their affairs, thence to a reception center, thence to a replacement center, thence to a camp and finally to a port. Nearly all these shifts are by rail.

Cumberlanders who are obliged to travel by rail now encounter many soldiers and sailors on trains, and experience much difficulty in obtaining reservations. One help in getting accommodations is suggested by railroad officials and transportation experts is to switch trips from the week-ends, long a habit with travelers, to other weekdays.

Effect of War On Population

FOR A SHORT TIME the nation can expect to continue experiencing a phenomenal boom in the marriage rate and a corresponding increase in the birth rate, both of which factors received their impetus from improved economic conditions resulting from war expenditures and the introduction and passage of the Selective Service Act.

But this trend will not continue, according to Dr. Philip M. Hauser, assistant director of the census.

Full participation in a hard war, Dr. Hauser says, probably will drop the marriage rate to a new low, and also the birth rate. And demobilization can be expected to result in a sharp increase in the marriage rate and birth rate, based on the experience of the last war. Temporarily there may even be an increase in the rate of natural population growth. But these increases can not be expected to be of long duration since there is no reason to expect a reversal of the long-time downward trend in fertility.

On the contrary, the war, in the long run, will probably accelerate the downward trend of the birth rate because of military mortality and disability, the emergence of "hollow classes" in the age pyramid of the nation, the imbalance of the sexes at marriageable age, the effects of war on human motivation in the rearing of offspring—inspired by uncertainty of the future—and extension of contraceptive knowledge. And the problem becomes more serious when it is known that the loss of 500,000 American males in the war would, for the first time in American history, create an excess of females.

Since American economy has been built on anticipation of population increase, any decrease in the rate of population growth can have serious economic consequences. The settlement of this war will call for greater recognition of the nation's population problems.

School Teachers On the Alert

IT IS not surprising that the American Federation of Teachers, holding its national convention in Gary, Ind., repulsed efforts of left-wing teachers to have expelled groups reinstated. It is surprising that any teacher branded as anti-American is connected with the American public school system at a time when the nation is fighting for its very life.

Units of the federation in New York and Philadelphia were ousted two years ago for alleged Communist support. They petitioned to be readmitted, but the convention denied their request.

The American Federation of Teachers is affiliated with the American Federation of Labor. Whenever teachers go in for unionism instead of working through their own professional organizations, they are compelled to come in contact with some radicals.

Apparently, the Gary convention delegates learned that while they strive for higher professional standards and better conditions in the schools they will have to be alert to repel the efforts of their Communist associates. The expelled groups, while no longer recognized by the federation, evidently have not forsaken their radical program and will continue their efforts to obtain a vantage point where they can resume their attempt to bore from within.

Commandos are different than ordinary unexpected guests. When they leave—instead of when they arrive—the place is in a mess.

Canada's new twelve-sided nickel has more corners than Prosperity used to be just around.

Hirohito fasts, we read. On the other hand, it may be just a case of losing his appetite after reading the Solomon Islands news.

The Browser's Bookshelf

By MARSHALL MASLIN

The Browser is an eager reader of novels whose setting is a parcel of the American scene—be it a story of Oregon or of Nebraska or of Maine or of Louisiana or Georgia. He loves to read of our native ways, still surviving in hidden valleys, and of our provincial legends.

These warm his heart and make him feel most deeply and inordinately an American. . . . And so, when he comes upon a book like Ben Robertson's "Red Hills and Cotton" (Knopf) he considers it a great treasure—because it could have been written about no other people than the settlers of the red-hill country of South Carolina.

Ben Robertson is a newspaperman. He went to school in Missouri, has worked for newspapers in Honolulu, Australia, New York and Chicago and London and the Orient but his heart is untraveled. His home is in the Carolinas among the proud Puritan Jeffersonian southern farmers. Their forefathers walked down from Pennsylvania three centuries ago and were never of the Cavalier breed that rode the ocean to Charleston.

They are proud people and they distrust all banks and machinery; they would rather have seven-cent cotton in the barn than forty-cent cotton in the bank. . . . and their mothers always taught them to finish every mouthful they took upon their plates. Cotton is their beloved crop and they hate all owners' agents. On the surface they are a laughing people but their true selves are stern, with a touch of austerity, and their existence is solemn. They fought in the Southern armies, bitterly and bravely, but their hearts were never with the slave owners (though some of their own people had owned them) and never with the great plantation owners. Always they have thought more of the spirit of man than of his possessions.

The Browser advises you most earnestly to read Ben Robertson's book about the plain, proud people who are his kinsfolk.

Robert Nathan will wish when he reads Ben Robertson's "The Stones Begin to Dance" (Duell, Sloan & Pearce) that he had written this story. Superficially it is a Nathan story and Kandel may owe something to Nathan, but actually this tale, although it has some of Nathan's fancy in it, is a stronger book than any of the older writer's.

It is a story of the little, rejected people who lived and wrung a small cheese-paring of a living out of their small market beneath Williamsburg Bridge—the little people who live in slums and are dispossessed when their masters decide to convert their hovels into more profitable "low income properties" and who are tossed out of their little market in strict legality. It is a noble little book, big in its reach and grasp. The Browser has grown old. Once he read "contemporary poetry" and understood it and pleased in it. Now, also he has fallen behind the procession. The poets have been caught up in the school of the vague and he understands them no more.

Take, for example, the poetry of Stephen Spender whose "Ruins and Visions: Poems 1934-1942" has just been published by Knopf with trumpets of praise from Archibald MacLeish, J. G. Fletcher, and John Chamberlain who acclaim its clean sharp stroke and nobility of emotion.

But though some of Mr. Spender's images are clean and clear and refreshing the Browser misses half of what he is saying. . . . It's somewhat Greek to Marshall Maslin.

More Learning About Brazil Is Seen As Helpful

By CHARLES P. STEWART
Central Press Columnist

WASHINGTON — More South American countries will be coming into the war as United Nations, against the Axis. In general, they won't be very active participants. They haven't the necessary facilities. However they will declare hostilities. Washington hears from one or another through diplomatic channels almost hourly.

Even though they're unlikely to do much actual fighting, with the exception of a little coastal patrol work, and a bit of aviation, Uncle Sam appreciates the value of the alignment. It'll be fine now, from the standpoint of all-around morale, and it'll be a grand thing for Western Hemisphere relationship after the war's over. We and our neighbors at last are on the verge of becoming really well acquainted with one another on an exceedingly friendly basis.

Closest Affiliate

For immediate purposes, though, Brazil's bound to be our closest affiliate.

This is not only because it's the biggest of the bunch, with sufficient military strength to be more or less physically outright helpful. It's also because of that bulge we hear so much about, which characterizes Brazil to the eastward into the Atlantic in the direction of Africa's westward bulge toward it, from the opposite point of the compass.

Naturally Brazil's bulge will be invaluable to us, as a base for operations against widely-advised Dakar, at the African bulge's extremity, in the event of its Axis occupation, with the connivance of Vichy, since it's a Vichy possession.

Bulge To Be Familiar

It behooves us, then, to devote a little special attention to Brazil, and to its bulge in particular. It's not improbable that we'll presently find ourselves as familiar with that bulge as we are with Michigan's bulge into the Great Lakes or Florida's into the Gulf of Mexico.

It shouldn't be forgotten that Brazil isn't Spanish, like all the rest of Latin America. It's Portuguese.

Between the Spanish and Portuguese I never could see any considerable difference, after several years' residence in their respective midlands. In their languages they differ slightly in a few of their rival spellings.

Illustratively, if a Spaniard wants to employ the equivalent of our word for "mister" he spells it senior—only, over the "n" he puts a little accent mark called a "tilde," which I can't produce because it isn't included in any English type face. Anyway, it makes senior, plus the tilde, sound like "sane" and "yore." A Portuguese gets that same identical effect by spelling the title senior, with no tilde.

Distinct Breeds

Yet Spaniards and Portuguese say they're as distinct breeds as they both are from Anglo-Saxons, and insist that they can't understand one another.

It's bunk, of course, but you'll acquiesce if you want to be tactful.

Each maintains that the opposite lingo is a dialect.

We should learn these little wrinkles.

Portuguese geography requires study also. Every Brazilian city has at least two names. The explanation is that they were christened by different groups of early settlers. Today some swear by one of 'em; others by others.

You'll have noticed that news from the extremity of the Brazilian bulge is dated from Pernambuco—pronounced Pern-am-book-o, with accent on the third syllable.

The Same City

Yet you'll have seen that same identical burg (everlastingly in dispatches, due to its strategic location) referred to half the time as Recife, pronounced Ray-see-jay and accented on the second syllable.

The mixture's confusing. It's characteristic of Brazil, though.

To the northward up the coast a bit (back from the point of the Brazilian bulge but an important port at the Amazon's mouth, where we're sure to be mightily busy) is Para, pronounced as in "ha-ha." But Brazilians all refer to it as "Belem," pronounced as Bailleam.

And don't say Bray-zill, as most fold do.

It begins with "Brah." The "z" is a cross between "z" and "th." Finally, carrying the emphasis, "eel" is the termination.

And, for heaven's sake, don't speak of an "Argentinian." An Argentine is an Argentine. Or, if you're designating him as of the masculine sex, he's an Argentine, or, if she's in the feminine classification, she's an Argentina. Referring to one of 'em as an "Argentinian" is comparable to terming an "American" as an "Amerikanian." It's enough to make 'em adhere to the Axis.

A Tax Law That Will Stand

Washington New Dealers Are Worried Over Primary Results in Three States

By PAUL MALLON

WASHINGTON, Aug. 30.—A shudder ran down congressional and executive political spines here when Senator Maybank squeezed through for re-nomination in North Carolina by something like 5,500 votes out of more than a quarter of a million cast.

The name Maybank may not mean much to people outside the South, because the senator has not been long in the national picture, but in South Carolina it stands for the most formidable Democratic power in the state—and there are no Republicans.

Mr. Maybank is close enough to Mr. Roosevelt to have his children use the White House pool as their swimming hole, and he has been the leader of the state since Senator Byrnes went up to the supreme bench.

His friends, in advance, figured the primary as a runaway, particularly as he was facing only 65-year-old Eugene Blease (half-brother of the late fiery Senator Cole Blease) who advanced no particularly hot political issue, at least not in his speeches. But when the votes were counted Senator Maybank had lost just about everything in the state except in his home town, Charleston, where his majority was sufficient to overcome his deficiencies elsewhere.

His friends, in advance, figured the primary as a runaway, particularly as he was facing only 65-year-old Eugene Blease (half-brother of the late fiery Senator Cole Blease) who advanced no particularly hot political issue, at least not in his speeches. But when the votes were counted Senator Maybank had lost just about everything in the state except in his home town, Charleston, where his majority was sufficient to overcome his deficiencies elsewhere.

That is what Senator La Follette advocated last year, to no avail. The Virginia and Wisconsin senators, disagreeing on what taxes should be enacted, see eye-to-eye on the need for arriving at an adequate and definite revenue program, and leaving it unchanged awhile.

American taxpayers can adjust their affairs to high taxation. They know that it is inescapable in war time. But they can not adjust their living standards and business practices to the confusion, the constant churning around, of year-after-year shifts in tax policies and rates.

There have been more than enough unavoidable uncertainties, through the depression and now in the war, and these will continue. But they ought not be compounded by needless and whimsical changes in tax laws.

Each year since 1930 there has been at least one new tax bill—and some years there have been two. It has seemed, almost, that every time the Treasury has hired a new expert he has come up with a new tax idea to try on the country.

Worry Saps The Vitality

From the Connellsville, Pa., Courier

"I just can't help worrying!"

Many's the time we've heard the expression. It may have been from one in one's family. There's worry about this and that and the other thing. There may and there may not be real grounds for anxiety. Oftentimes the individual's attitude is built on imagination. We feel sorry for such persons, but it is usually beyond our power to help them. Only by resolute will can the distressing situation be relieved.

Worry, we are told, is a sort of poison, and not a very subtle one at that. It can cause physical breakdown. Even a slight worry will cause headaches. It causes indigestion. It eats up vitality in a large way. It may cause loss of weight equivalent to that caused by lack of food.

In these days of trouble enough for all one of our jobs is to resolutely cast behind us as many troubles as is possible. Business men, professional men, teachers, laborers, the state, particularly protested.

Mr. Maybank's opposition candidate made no point of this situation, but on the second issue—the question of white supremacy—Mr. Blease did once or twice indicate that, if elected, he would vote for Mr. Roosevelt's policies on every question except that one. He did not need to say much.

During the campaign, Mrs. Roosevelt came into the adjoining state of North Carolina, to Salisbury, to address the African Methodist Episcopal Zion Church of America. Many leaders in the town tried to devise polite ways to keep her out, fearing her presence might reopen some recent inter-racial scratches over the demand of negro Boy Scouts to march in a Fourth of July parade with white Boy Scouts.

In the end, however, some of the ladies of the town received her, took her to inspect a non-union hosiery mill (where she said in her column later that excellent working conditions prevailed) and she made an address asking "equal opportunity" in war work for equal qualifiers.

This attracted little attention in North Carolina, but it got plenty in South Carolina. Maybank, of course, had nothing to do with it, except that he is a good friend of Mrs. Roosevelt.

In congressional quarters, South Carolinians have said the situation was further heightened by men and women war workers, who returned to the state after brief experience working in government departments, where equal opportunity has been provided negroes.

Two Lessons

The primary result showed two lessons irrefutably. The current method of gasoline rationing has not yet been justified in South Carolina, and unless it is justified—by Interior Secretary Ickes, for example, removing his censorship over supplies in the East, or by the government publicizing the needs of the armed services, or by trying to help business people who are suffering from it—political repercussions elsewhere can hardly be avoided.

It shows, without question, also, that whoever wants to thrust out age-old racial problems now is not doing the war unity program any good, or helping the administration in the South.

California Turns

The California results, when coupled with New York, also caused nearly as great a commotion among the politicians here. The Republicans are likely to win those two of the most powerful political states in the union this coming November.

They already have Republican governors in Pennsylvania, Ohio, Illinois, Massachusetts, and there the acquisition of New York and California would give them a top hand in practically all the most powerful states, except Michigan and New Jersey.

Their leaders are not now claiming that they can win a majority in the House of Representatives, but events so far certainly indicate the strength of the New Deal element in the next House will be shown further.

Both the California and New York situations jointly reflected a turn in the tide of radicalism, California particularly has been wild and woolly and all the rest of it in recent years, even to the point where "Thirty Dollars Every Thursday" became popular there.

A new national trend may possibly be in the making.

housewives, we cannot do our best so long as we let trouble, often imaginary, prey on our minds.

On the other hand, work itself is a salve for the troubled mind. Or recreation may lead into more pleasant paths. A motion picture show will help. It turns the thoughts into other channels. Anything to accomplish this last named purpose is helpful. When in deepest trouble it is well to remember that everything, regardless of how depressing it may be, passes eventually. As has often been said, time heals all wounds.

People Dissatisfied

But the people all could see a pipe line running right through their state into North Carolina, and made no secret of their dissatisfaction with the existing administration. The Business Executives' association, in the upper part of the state, particularly protested.

Mr. Maybank's opposition candidate made no point of this situation, but on the second issue—the question of white supremacy—Mr. Blease did once or twice indicate that, if elected, he would vote for Mr. Roosevelt's policies on every question except that one. He did not need to say much.

One reason is that the army specialist corps functions as a personnel placement bureau so far as the rest of the army or War department is concerned. There is no vacancy unless someone in the army asks for an individual for a particular job. Now it may be natural for officers to hold on to their assistants or staff because these men have become familiar with the work, but at a time when even married men with children are being told to prepare for induction, it is unfortunate that the same severe discipline isn't being used to oust from their swivel chairs and desks men who could be used in the combat units.

It should be understood that only men above 30 years of age are eligible for appointment in the army specialist corps. They are accepted below that age only if they are not in class 4-F in the draft, which means they are physically disqualified for military service. Ineligible men are up to the age of 45 with a 1-A classification or men who have been deferred for occupational reasons.

Thus, men above 30 years of age who are married and have children are eligible and can be used if the army will make up its mind to call them from the job. There are three groups in the corps—officers, specialists, and mechanical and technical men. The rate of pay for the last class is the same as that of the prevailing wage for skilled men in the area concerned.

Many Applicants

Sometime soon, the army specialist corps is going to have an increased volume of applications from married men with dependents. But the corps management can do nothing about this vast number of applicants till the army makes up its mind to call for them. The thousands who have applied are disturbed because they haven't heard from Washington. The trouble isn't in the army specialist corps. It's in the army routine itself.

Somebody soon will have to look over this reservoir of 225,000 men if only to answer the criticisms now being leveled at the selective service policy which demands that the partially blind and the partially deaf shall be thrust into uniform when there are so many men who want to go but aren't being accepted.

Plant Heads Are Becoming Worried Over Draft Calls

By DAVID LAWRENCE

WASHINGTON, Aug. 29.—From all over the country come reports of restlessness of key executives who are in their early 40's and, even though they have dependent children, are subject to the draft.

Many of them are thinking about getting commissions because they served in the last war. Others want to get posts in industry which their training would be utilized.

But, all in all, the employer nowadays who is faced with considerable worry about how to make production schedules with the least amount of turnover in personnel is getting additional problems thrust upon him because of official predictions concerning the drafting of married men.

Maybe after elections, when the 18-to-20 year old group is ordered drafted by act of Congress, this pressure will ease but for the next two months the increased burdens placed on already heavily strained managements will not be diminished.

What is causing much more perplexity and annoyance, however, is the way the War department is failing to take advantage of the reservoir of 225,000 men who have volunteered for the army specialist corps. The corps was the idea of Gen. Marshall, and it is as sound an idea as the army could possibly have for mobilizing manpower, because it provides that men of technical knowledge shall do the jobs that able-bodied men with military training are likely to be assigned to do during a war.

Numerous Functions

Most people do not realize that, apart from combat, there are numerous functions which must be served by an army. Men must be housed and clothed. They must be fed and provided with the necessary utilities—heat, light, water and sanitary facilities. They require means of transportation, innumerable repair shops, roads, and huge quantities of tools and materials that must be gathered and stored. Vast accounting jobs must be done.

Now it was assumed that the government would accept the services of volunteers for these tasks and thus release trained combat men for active duty. But for some reason or other, known only to the War department, this hasn't worked out. While 225,000 men have volunteered, places for only 11,000 have been developed, and it is believed that less than 5,000 jobs have actually been filled.

Replacement Bureau

One reason is that the army specialist corps functions as a personnel placement bureau so far as the rest of the army or War department is concerned. There is no vacancy unless someone in the army asks for an individual for a particular job. Now it may be natural for officers to hold on to their assistants or staff because these men have become familiar with the work, but at a time when even married men with children are being told to prepare for induction, it is unfortunate that the same severe discipline isn't being used to oust from their swivel chairs and desks men who could be used in the combat units.

'Remember Pearl Harbor'
Has Thrilling Theme

As timely as tomorrow's newspaper headlines and even twice as exciting is "Remember Pearl Harbor," the Republic action drama which opens today at the Maryland theatre in the first of a two day run.

Magnificently enacted by a splendid cast which includes Donald M. Barry, Allan Curtis, Fay McKenzie, Rhys Williams, Sig Ruman, and Maynard Holmes, and brilliantly directed by Joseph Santley, this new motion picture is one of the most vivid and entertaining films produced in many years.

The battle scenes at the climax are, of course, entirely fictional. Nevertheless they have been splendidly staged and rank among the most spectacular ever filmed in Hollywood.

Barry, Curtis, and Holmes are seen as three soldier pals stationed at a United States Army post in the Philippines. Barry is the "rugged individualist" of the trio whose blithe disregard for rules and regulations keeps not only himself, but the other two as well, constantly in hot water.

However, in the critical moment, he is found to be not wanting in courage and resourcefulness. When, with the opening of war between the United States and Japan, a contingent of enemy troops attempt to land near the army post, his undaunted bravery serves as an inspiration to the hard-fighting Americans.

The accent in the picture is definitely on action, but there's romance too — with Barry and Curtis vying for the affections of lovely Fay McKenzie.

"Pride of the Yankees"
Is Genuine Romance

The romance of a famous athlete and a typical American girl is the real-life basis of "The Pride of the Yankees," starting Wednesday at the Liberty, Samuel Goldwyn's newest production for RKO Radio release with Gary Cooper starring.

Cooper portrays the noted New York Yankee ballplayer, Lou Gehrig, whose untimely death from paralysis ended one of the most inspiring careers in modern sports annals. Millions of Americans knew of Gehrig's amazing exploits on the diamond but very few knew the man himself, or of his courageous struggle upward from poverty — and it is the human "behind the scenes" story of the former janitor's son and the Chicago girl he married that Goldwyn has brought to the screen.

Opening with Gehrig as an eager eleven-year-old playing baseball on the vacant lots along Amsterdam Avenue in New York, the picture reaches a dramatic conclusion on the memorable "Lou Gehrig Day" at the Yankee Stadium in 1939.

when an army of fans gathered for their hero's farewell to the game he loved.

Teresa Wright plays the loyal wife and Walter Brennan appears as Gehrig's sports-writing sponsor, while Babe Ruth, Bill Dickey, "Bob" Meusel and other noted ballplayers portray themselves in the offering. Sam Wood directed, with Paul Gallico writing the original story.

"The Pride of the Yankees" also features the brilliant dancing team of Veloz and Yolanda, and Ray Noble and his orchestra.

Lippold Heirs Oppose Sale of Old Landmark

Ask Court To Nullify Purchase of Farm by Walter White

The property was purchased by public auctioneer Walter W. White on August 1 for $25,100.

The heirs, Charles W. Lippold, Louis A. Lippold, Mary Lippold, Henry P. Lippold and Helen Lippold, claim in their petition to the court, that they intended to buy the property at the sale, but were wrongly advised by an attorney through a misunderstanding.

The farm was purchased by White. The court is asked to declare the sale null and void.

The farm covers 126 acres and is situated on the north side of Lippold, sold the farm for $25,000 to their three sons, Charles W., Louis A. and Henry Lippold, who gave her a mortgage for the full amount. With interest the total amount against the property is now $44,937.40. Walter Capper, attorney, was assigned the mortgage for the purpose of foreclosure.

The exponents said they retained another attorney to arrange keeping the property in the family and were ready to pay $25,000 for it, but the lawyer advised them that the property was not worth that amount, and told them they would be "unethical" to buy it in that manner.

The exponents also contend they retained a local realtor to be the agent at the auction and offer him $10,000 for the property, but there was some misunderstanding and White's offer was accepted

Army and Navy Officials Have Good Reasons for Rejections, Writer Says

By LOGAN CLENDENING, M.D.
We have some bitter complaints these days about rejections for the army and navy, but there is always a good reason for what the services do even if the examining doctor doesn't have time to explain it to the selectee at the moment of examination. I heard a new angle the other day. A man had applied for the submarine service and was perfect physically in every way except that he had some dental bridge work which caused them to turn him down. He couldn't seem to reconcile with the eternal scheme of things, nor could I until a Navy medic explained to me that effective gripping of the mouthpiece of the submarine escape apparatus, or "lung," will be interfered with if crowns, bridges, dentures or even pyorrhea are present, which seems reasonable.

Dr. Clendening will answer questions of general interest only, and then only through his column.

Bad Breath Causes Rejection
Halitosis is also a cause for rejection in submarine service, which I can also understand: If you are cooped up in a small space with a fellow with bad breath it would lead, in my case, to mutiny.

The Navy stresses vision and the Army feet: "No arches — no marches."

The greatest consideration, however, in the examination of any selectee is the saving of government money after the war from pensions. In this field I see a great improvement over the selection in the last war, especially of those who have tuberculosis.

In 1917 there were boards set up to examine all draftees for tuberculosis, but they did their work in such an incredibly careless way that thousands of men with active tuberculosis were accepted. They often developed acute symptoms and broke down before they had been in the Army six weeks.

Those who developed active symptoms in France and had to be cared for in Army sanitarium cost the government millions of dollars. Most people even with active tuberculosis are entirely unaware of it and the examination has to be very special to detect it when no symptoms are present.

When an enlisted man, because of physical disability, is found to be unfit for military service he is retained in the hospital until his condition has reached a point where he will no longer be benefited by treatment in a military hospital. He is then given a Certificate of Disability for Discharge.

Many are weeded out quite early in their military career, the largest number within three months. Most of them are simply temperamentally unfit for military life. They are continuously reporting for sick call for minor complaints, or their hearts flutter, or their backs ache. They are much better off in civil life, where they recover with less real to me than the lonely hill-sides inside of us."

"Yes!" she said with her breath. "Lonely people have lookouts within themselves where they look up and down the mountains and valleys of things outside of them."

"I know," she said. "Yes, I know."

"It's written in your face."

She turned her face to him with a slightly startled expression, but he went on:

1 Killed, 4 Hurt, When Train Hits Car on Crossing

George H. Miller, 28, Dies Instantly in Crash at Pear Street

Five Persons in Car Were on Way to Mass at Catholic Church

One person was killed and four injured Sunday morning at 5:20 o'clock while on their way to church when the car in which they were riding was struck on the Pear street crossing by B. and O. passenger train No. 20, the Ambassador, which was traveling east.

The dead: George Howard Miller, 28, of Valley road.

The injured:

Charles May, 15, of Valley road. Possible fractured vertebrae and pelvis. His condition is "serious".

Mrs. Cecelia Martin, 42, wife of Joseph Martin, 520 Columbia avenue. She was treated for shock and her condition when admitted was "serious" as she suffers from a heart ailment. Late last night she was reported slightly improved.

Francis Martin, 17, son of Mrs. Martin, both shoulders injured and suffering from shock. Mrs. Frances Greise, 30, of Valley road, wife of Herman Greise, lacerations of the forehead, ear, and numerous abrasions of the arms and legs. Her condition is "fairly good."

On Way to Church

The five persons were on their way to 5:30 a. m. Mass at St. Peter and Paul Catholic church when the tragedy occurred. The passenger train was hauled by a Diesel engine which struck the right rear side of the car, damaging back part of the machine and cracked glass doors. The windshield was also cracked.

The terrific impact turned the car around and Miller fell out onto cross ties about ten feet from the watchbox. No watchman was on duty at the time. A watchman was scheduled to come on duty at 7 a. m. The car's gasoline tank was knocked off the car into a lumber pile in an adjoining lumber yard.

A woman's pocketbook and rosary beads were found near lumber sheds about forty feet from the scene of the accident. Scattered over the crossing was a bushel basket of tomatoes which had been in (Continued on Page 11, Col. 7)

C. Walter Baker Will Begin Serving 2-Year Term for Embezzlement

HAGERSTOWN, Md., Aug. 30 (AP)—State's Attorney Charles F. Wagaman announced disbarred Attorney C. Walter Baker would begin a two-year term for embezzlement at the House of Correction tomorrow, his appeal from the court decision having been denied.

Baker, who was disbarred as a practicing attorney following formal proceedings in circuit court Aug. 17, filed notice of his appeal dismissal with the clerk of court of Allegany county, Wagaman said.

The former Washington county lawyer who practiced here for about twenty-five years, was indicted by the February, 1942, grand jury on two charges of embezzlement and tried before the full bench of the Allegany county court.

Since his conviction he had been free under bond pending action on his appeal.

George's Creek To Get Mail by Truck Service

Star Route Established To Replace Cumberland and Pennsylvania

When old No. 125, the Cumberland and Pennsylvania Railroad passenger train which has run between Cumberland and Piedmont for nearly a century, makes its final trip today, it will be the last time many people along the route will get their mail by train. Arrangements have been made by the postal department to carry mail by truck to all the communities formerly served by the railroad.

A schedule has been established and a contract let, so that all of these residents of the county will get regular and prompt service for in-coming and out-going mail.

The truck will leave Cumberland twice daily making two round trips. Mail will be taken from the Cumberland post office at 6:15 a. m. and 2:15 p. m. The return trips will be made immediately, arriving at the local post office at 11 a. m. and 6:45 p. m.

Legion Makes No Plans for Next Meeting

Executive Committee Will Decide Time and Place of 1943 Convention

Due to the uncertainty of transportation and other conditions a year from now, the American Legion committee time and place for next year's Department convention recommended that no immediate plans be made, and referred the matter to the executive committee.

This is one of the important pieces of business at conventions, but in view of existing conditions, and the possibility that the situation will be no better next year, most of the legionnaires here for the 24th annual convocation were of the same opinion regarding next year's session. In fact some of the delegates were critical because the convention was attempted this year, however, it seemed to work out satisfactorily in the end.

On the motion of Montfaucon Post No. 4 of Baltimore, the delegates went on record Saturday, just before adjournment, as appreciative of the hospitality of official and unofficial Cumberland. Special mention was made of the cooperation of newspapers, radio, city officials and all others who helped make the convention possible and successful.

Many delegates expressed the unofficial opinion that they would like to return to Cumberland for their convention at least every other year.

New Voters Must Register Tomorrow To Vote in Primary

Tomorrow will be the final registration day for new voters to register and be eligible to vote in the Primary election, September 8.

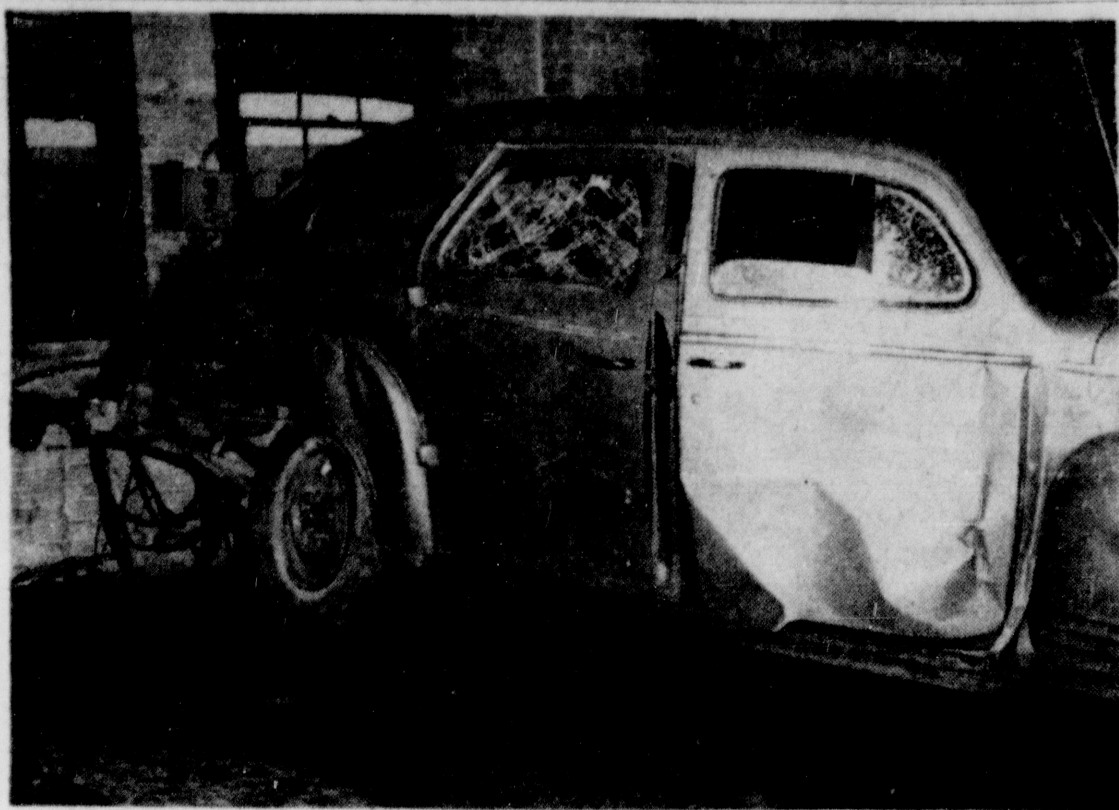

Young men and women who become twenty-one years of age on or before November 3, the date of the general election, are eligible to register.

The next registration day will not be held until after primary election, September 29, has been designated by election officials as the date for the first registration after the Primary. A third registration day will be held October 6, followed by revision day on October 7.

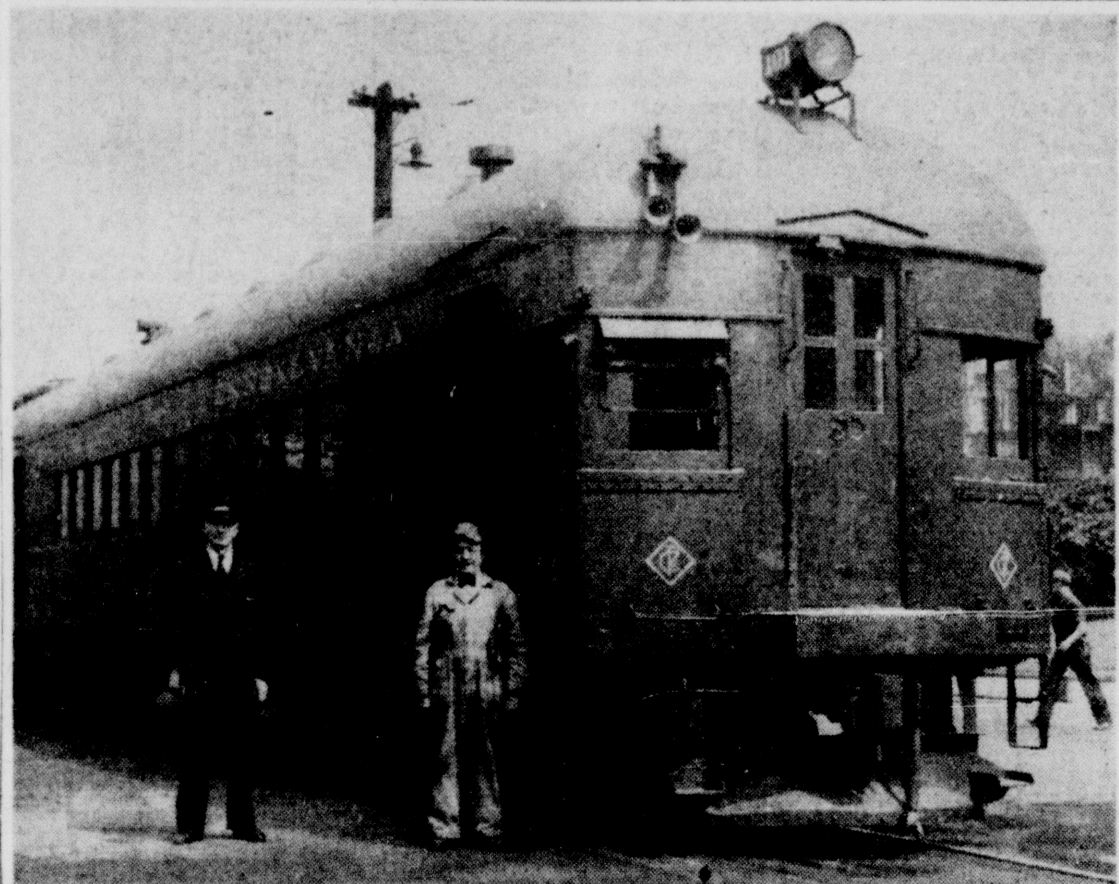

Business School Sets Registration Dates

Registration of students for the commercial department of Catholic Girls Central Business School will be conducted Saturday and Sunday, September 5 and 6, at the school, North Centre street.

There will be no change in the personnel of the Central high school faculty of five members, according to Sister Marie, principal.

STRUCK BY TRAIN—Here's the green touring car in which one met death and four were injured early yesterday morning when the machine was struck by a Baltimore and Ohio Diesel eastbound passenger train on the Pear street crossing. The car had almost cleared the crossing when the passenger locomotive ploughed into the right side, knocked the gas tank loose, mashed the fender and cracked the door glass and the windshield. George H. Miller, 28, Valley road dairy farm employee, one of the five passengers who were on the way to mass at St. Peter and Paul church, died at the scene of the crash. Two women, Mrs. Herman Greise, 30, and Mrs. Cecelia Martin, 42, and two youths, Francis Martin, 17, and Charles May, Jr., 15, were injured.

AWAIT FINAL RUN—Passenger service on the Cumberland and Pennsylvania railroad, which has been furnished by that company for ninety-seven years, will be discontinued after today. The final of two daily trains operating between Cumberland and Piedmont, W. Va., is scheduled to leave the Queen City depot today at 3:20 p. m. Daniel Arnold, of Westernport, left, conductor, and John E. "Jack" Seckman, of Westernport, right, who have been in charge of the gas-electric train shown above for the past four years, will return to the freight service. Both have been with the company approximately forty years. The gas-electric train replaced the steam locomotive in 1929. Seckman succeeded the late "Mike" Cosgrove as engineer October 18, 1938, and Arnold became passenger conductor in February, 1939, succeeding the late Thomas "Dooley" Thomas.

Crowd of 2,500 Attends Songfest Program at Park

A. Florian Wilson Directs Final Entertainment of the Season

Despite cool weather, a crowd of 2,500 persons attended the second and final Community Songfest, sponsored by the City of Cumberland, and staged last evening in the amphitheatre of Constitution park.

Featuring the program were marimba-accompanied and electric guitar duets, vocal solos by Dr. William Capaldi and Miss Ruth Lee Richards, a baritone horn solo by Joseph K. Trenton and two organ solos by Mrs. W. Loran Ranck, who was accompanied for the group singing.

Dr. Capaldi sang "The Marine Hymn" and "White Cliffs of Dover" while Miss Richards presented "One Dozen Roses" and "Deep Purple."

Trenton played "The Rosary" and "Bell in the Lighthouse" on the baritone horn.

The group singing was led by A. Florian Wilson, well known song leader and director of the program which lasted one and a half hours.

Last evening's entertainment concluded the outdoor musical programs sponsored by the City of Cumberland for the 1942 season.

Unseasonable Weather Closes Celanese Pool Week Ahead Schedule

Unseasonable weather for the past week resulted in the closing of the Celanese pool for the 1942 season yesterday, Hugo Keller, sponsor, announced last evening.

The pool usually is closed on Labor Day.

Keller estimated the season's attendance at 20,000 admissions not including season passes and free admissions to service men in uniform.

The pool opened its ninth season on Decoration day.

Taxi Companies Face Shortage Of Drivers; May Employ Women

Operators Say Many Cabs Idle because Men Are Not Available

Don't be surprised if you awaken some morning, late for work, call a taxi cab and when it arrives, you discover a pretty blonde, or perhaps a brunette at the wheel. And don't think you're still asleep and dreaming, because it is happening in many towns and cities, and it might happen here.

Operators of local taxi cab companies, contacted yesterday, said they have a very definite employment problem, and about forty per cent of the city's taxi cabs are idle because drivers are not available.

Defense industry, the draft and other activities attributed directly to the war are gradually draining the city of its man power, and such firms as taxi companies, trucking enterprises and many other establishments are beginning to feel the shortage of help.

Women Are Considered Officials of local cab companies said yesterday they have been seriously considering the employment of women as drivers for several weeks. One operator said he has already interviewed several women and believes he can employ some who will make excellent and capable drivers.

The continued operation of taxis is important, because many people are using personal cars less, due to gasoline rationing and scarcity of tires. And in order not to interfere with transportation of defense and other workers, taxi company officials realize they must keep all their cars running if possible.

As one operator put it, "cabs won't run themselves, and when we don't answer calls promptly, someone usually misses a train, is late for work, or suffers one way or another. There just aren't enough capable drivers to go around any more since the army and defense plants need men so badly. So we fellows in the cab business have only two choices. We can hire youngsters who are not responsible, or we can

Michael Welsh, Retired B and O Conductor, Dies

Octogenarian Succumbs at Home after Being Ill since October

Michael James Welsh, 85, well-known retired B. and O. passenger conductor, died at his home, 227 Harrison street, Sunday morning after being ill since last October. He suffered a dislocated shoulder about a month ago.

A son of the late Patrick and Mary McEnroy Welsh, of Tunnelton, W. Va., he came to Cumberland in the service of the B. and O. about fifty-three years ago. His wife, who preceded him in death, was the former Margaret Ann Flanagan, of Grafton, W. Va. He was the last member of the immediate family.

Retired Twelve Years Ago Mr. Welsh retired from the service of the railroad about twelve years ago after having completed fifty-five years of service. His brother, the late Charles J. Welsh, was also a B. and O. passenger conductor. He died in December, 1940. The two brothers had a total of 109 years with the B. and O. railroad.

He was a charter member of the Brotherhood of Locomotive Trainmen; past president of the B. and O. Veterans; chief conductor of the Order of Railroad Conductors; a charter member of the Fourth Degree, Knights of Columbus; a member of the Holy Name Society and the Catholic Knights of America; and a member of St. Patrick's Catholic church.

Police Hunt Man Who Left Stolen Car at Clarysville

State police are searching the woods in the Clarysville district for a man who leaped from a stolen car about 6:30 p. m. Sunday when Trooper M. Frank Beamer took after him when he noticed the car was one which had been reported stolen several hours previously in Terra Alta, W. Va.

West Virginia State Police radioed a message to the local barracks of the theft of the car from in front of the B. and O. station in Terra Alta and also reported the escape of Gay Bragg, 23, a West Virginia convict receiving treatment at the Hopewell sanitarium.

State police believe Bragg stole the car and was on his way to his sister's home in Rising Sun, Md. Trooper Beamer was cruising toward Probstburg when he spied the car a short distance from Lion Spring on Route 40. The car was traveling in the opposite direction. Trooper Beamer turned his car and gave chase.

Bragg and a 16-year-old hitchhiker, Charles Withers, of Park Hill, Pa., took to the woods. Trooper Beamer caught the youth but the "convict" escaped in the dense underbrush. When questioned at the LaVale barracks, the Withers youth said the man had picked him up in Grantsville.

Withers said he lived in Park Hill with his brother Emmett and was on his way to visit his father, Albert Withers, of Paw Paw, W. Va. He is being detained pending an investigation.

In the meantime Trooper Beamer, Sgt. John H. Doud, and Trooper Joseph White and George Browning, are searching the woods for the driver, thought to be Bragg. He was sentenced in West Virginia for grand larceny, state police said.

Daniel McMullen Is Elected Legion State Commander

Marks Second Time Local Lawyer Has Been Named to This Office

The election of Daniel F. McMullen, Cumberland attorney, to the office of department commander of the American Legion at the closing session of the twenty-fourth annual convention here Saturday, marked the second time that a Cumberland attorney has been elected to this singular honor.

Dr. Col. George Henderson, former mayor of this city and well known lawyer is the only other Cumberlander to hold this office. He served about eleven years.

The election of McMullen over Dr. Herbert C. Blake, of Baltimore, ended one of the closest contests for the office in years. The final tabulation showed that McMullen received 210 votes and Dr. Blake 195. Before the final figures were officially announced, however, Dr. Blake, who had been watching the roll call carefully, moved that the election of McMullen be declared unanimous.

When the roll call began for nominations for department commander, U. S. Marines Post No. 1, Baltimore, yielded to Hamilton Post No. 20, Baltimore, which placed Dr. Blake's name before the convention. The roll call proceeded to Fort Cumberland Post No. 13, at which time Fred A. Puderbaugh nominated Mr. McMullen. Among the seconding speeches was one by Miss Anne Sloan, James P. Love Post No. 92, Lonaconing, which counteracted one of the most potent arguments of the Blake supporters. Miss Sloan said if it were so very important for the department commander to spend so much time in Baltimore during the coming year, as the Blake speakers declared, then "Dan McMullen will move to Baltimore for the duration, if that becomes necessary in his line of duty as head of the Maryland American Legion!"

Godfrey Child Wins Even closer than the battle for department commander was the contest for national executive committee. In this race between J. Bryan Hobbs, Laurel, incumbent, and Godfrey C. Child, Pocomoke City, the first ballot resulted in a tie, 196 votes each. A new ballot was ordered and Child won with 198 to 189. Hobbs immediately moved that the election be made unanimous. For alternate national executive committee, Samuel Cohen, Hagerstown, the incumbent, defeated Herbert Wynne, Dundalk. About two-thirds through the roll call, Cohen's election seemed assured so Wynne withdrew and moved the Hagerstown man's unanimous selection.

Today Is Final Discount Date On County Taxes

Today is the last day to pay county taxes and still earn a discount, according to Alben C. Thompson, tax collector.

Three per cent discount will be allowed on taxes paid up until 4 p. m. today. The office is closed at noon from 12 until 1 o'clock.

After today, beginning September 1, interest at the rate of one-half per cent per month must be charged for each month or fractional part thereof, according to law.

County tax collections have been the best in years, but there are still a few persons who have not paid annual levies. Thompson said he hopes that property owners will take advantage of this final discount date.

No discount is allowed on state taxes, which can also be paid at the court house. On state taxes, interest at the rate of one-half per cent per month or fraction of a month will be charged on and after October 1.

Alleged Draft Law Violator Arrested Here

Lester W. Harvey, 26, Will Be Given Hearing before U. S. Commissioner

Lester Warfield Harvey, 26, of Baltimore, formerly of this city, was arrested at 2:15 a. m. Sunday by city police on two charges of violating the Selective Service act.

Harvey was wanted by the FBI of the complaint of Local Draft Board No. 1, Virginia avenue, that he had failed to appear for induction in July and failing to notify the board of a change in his address, according to Delisle Chaney, chief clerk of Board No. 1.

Chaney said Harvey was supposed to have been employed at the Bethlehem Steel Company in Baltimore but no trace of him could be found until Officers C. C. Roby and Darrell J. Racey picked him up while cruising in a police car early Sunday morning.

Harvey should have appeared for induction at the same time his brother, Robert Harvey, showed up at the local board. Robert Harvey is now stationed with the United States Army in Georgia. Another brother, John Harvey, is also serving with the army in Hawaii.

Lester Harvey is held in the city jail for a preliminary hearing before United States Commissioner Wilbur W. Wilson. He was formerly employed at the Celanese plant as a charge hand, according to Chaney.
